Such a serious demonstration on Ishango's bone should have been better prepared and presented. The form of the messages must be treated as carefully as the background. The background is however very interesting. We Africans must live up to our ambitions for our continent, arm ourselves with science and communicate with pedagogy to reappropriate our wealth and dignity.

Mombolight quite agree but the point of the Technological and Technological rigor with adequate training would solve the question finally I think. Because the seriousness is there it does not lose the thread knowing what it speaks and it

Very well said my brother, slavery and colonization put us in a falsified state of consciousness. It's really special how we arrived at the state of mind to be totally disinterested in studying anything about us. As Mbog Bassong said, many of the elements of our science is in our religion. Lately I was following a documentary on the vodou in Benin, realized by a Frenchman, at the end there was a demonstration of large semi-spherical structure in straw that moved by itself. These are things that could be put in the laboratory to accompany insiders in order to be able to explain and apply this knowledge in different areas of life. As white does for his scientific knowledge and discovery. But no,

African values are part of the universal values of humanity. So we do not have to blacken anything. The human being I am is a man of his own in the fundamental concept of Bantu ontology through the universal process (Ubuntu - Untu - Ntu) Universal Vision of Africa
